Guiding Principles/Ngā kaupapa o te tohu

Whānau Ora places whānau at the centre of decision making and sector service delivery that is distinctly built on Māori foundations. It recognises whānau as a collective entity and endorses whānau capacity for self-determination. Kaupapa Māori Public Health (KMPH) also highlights the cohesive and interdependent relationships of whānau, hapū and iwi, and asserts that whānau aspirations are reflective in the delivery of KMPH community initiatives.

Te Oranga (Participation in Society) is dependent on the terms under which Māori participate in society and on the confidence with which they can, for example, access good health services, or the school of their choice, or sport and recreation. All social indicators of Māori wellbeing rests with full Māori participation in the economy, education, employment, justice and other areas where Māori health profile indicators note Māori health inequities.

Mauriora (Cultural Identity) explores the cultural identity and inner strength and vitality of an individual, whānau, hapū, iwi and/or Māori community. Māori interaction with the environment, and entry to and involvement in learning of tribal lore, te reo, tikanga and kawa strongly embraces Mauriora.

Acknowledgement, recognition and understanding of legal obligations, systems, procedures, compliances and ethics is also an important responsibility.

Waiora (Physical Environment) highlights the inseparable and enduring relationship between Māori and their natural environment. Waiora embraces both the physical and spiritual elements that connect Māori to their environments e.g. land, sea, air, rivers, lakes, mountains and forests, and facilitates access by Māori to the Māori world of knowledge, understanding, and cultural expressions and institutions.

Toi Ora (Healthy Lifestyles) supports the development, strengthening and maintenance of Māori healthy lifestyles towards reducing the preventable consequences of unhealthy lifestyles e.g. eating habits, alcohol and drugs, unsafe roadway practices (seatbelts, helmets), tobacco, and sedentary habits. Protection from injury, self-harm, illness and influencing legislation and health policy changes are major challenges facing KMPH promoters, whose interventions and activities must be culturally responsive.

Ngā Manukura (Community Leadership) is based on the principle of local leadership and is a critical success factor in any community initiative that cannot be replaced by the important role of health professionals regardless of technical or professional qualifications. Self-determination is a key object in relation to whānau, hapū, iwi, marae, and community populations, and supports the development of distinct and unique Māori world-view initiatives and interventions.

Te Mana Whakahaere (Autonomy – Leadership in Health) assures whānau, hapū, iwi, marae and community are able to demonstrate autonomy and self-determination in promoting their own health. Te Mana Whakahaere appropriately demonstrates the balance of the KMPH worker leadership role when working with the range of leaders and population groups in the community.

General conditions for programme/ Ngā tikanga whānui o te hōtaka

Programme delivery and all assessments must actively support ways of teaching, learning, learning support, and pastoral care preferred by Māori.

Programmes should also include mechanisms and protocols to engage, involve and consult tangata whenua and/or mana whenua with regard to local tikanga and kawa pertaining to the outcomes of the qualification.

This qualification is distinctively Māori, and while the skills and knowledge will be transferable, this qualification is custom designed specifically for application in Māori contexts. The term kaupapa Māori incorporates te reo me ngā tikanga ā-hapū, and/or ā-iwi. Kaupapa Māori Public Health blends two well established theoretical frameworks together, (Kaupapa Māori and Public Health), to enable Māori health to be analysed and addressed within the wider New Zealand population. It provides a framework that focusses on the determinants of health, which aligns with the health needs and realities of whānau, hapū, iwi, and Māori communities. The fundamental principles of Public Health align with the Māori principles of Te Oranga, Mauriora, Whānau Ora, Toiora, Waiora, Ngā Manukura and Te Mana Whakahaere.

Ngā Mātāpono

The Mātāpono adopted for the Kaupapa Māori Public Health Suite of qualifications are taken from “Te Pae Mahutonga”, a Māori Model of Health developed by Mason Durie.

The kaupapa and methodologies of Te Hono o Te Kahurangi are inextricably woven throughout the mātāpono that have been adopted in this qualification. Expressions of the kaupapa can be seen in the following mātāpono of Te Pae Mahutonga:
